

National Weather Service

Wilmington, NC

Outlook Period: April 13-17, 2020
Time Issued: April 13, 2020 12:05 pM

Prepared by: Reid Hawkins

Severe Thunderstorms Move off the Coast, Strong Winds to Continue This Afternoon. Sunny weather expected by late week.

Overview: As the intense line of Thunderstorms moves off the coast, a cold front will stall along the coast and low-pressure area will develop along the front bringing additional rain to the area on Tuesday Night & Wednesday. By late Wednesday, the weather will improve, and high pressure will dominate the region through Friday.

Impacts: A Wind Advisory over land, and a Gale Warning and High Surf Advisory over the coastal waters will continue through this afternoon. Southwest winds of 25 to 35 mph and gusts 40 to 50 mph are expected to diminish by evening.

Additional Rainfall & Rivers: 0.50" to 0.75" is expected Tuesday Night into Wednesday. Rivers are expected to remain below flood stage except for minor flooding on the Pee Dee River at Pee Dee beginning Thursday.

Tonight through Thursday Night Forecast

Wilmington

Florence

Myrtle Beach

For the latest updates, please visit our website and social media outlets:

www.weather.gov/ilm

fb.com/nwswilmingtonnc

@NWSWilmingtonNC